

---

Step 10 Daily Inventory Worksheet

---

Step 10 Daily Inventory Worksheet

Downloaded from app.ardentx.com by Blankenship & Rowan

---

INTRODUCTION: THE POWER OF A DAILY PRACTICE IN RECOVERY

---

Recovery is rarely a straight line. It is a journey of continuous growth, self-awareness, and honest reflection. For those working a 12-step program, the steps do not end after the ninth step. Instead, the maintenance steps—10, 11, and 12—form the bedrock of a sustained, fulfilling sober life. Among these, Step 10 stands out as the daily reset button. It invites us to stop, look inward, and take inventory of our day, our actions, and our attitudes. The Step 10 Daily Inventory Worksheet is not just another piece of paper; it is a structured tool that transforms a simple concept into a life-changing habit. This article explores the purpose of the Step 10 daily inventory, how to use a worksheet effectively, and why this daily practice is essential for long-term recovery.

Step 10 asks us to “continue to take personal inventory and when we were wrong promptly admitted it.” It sounds simple, but without a reliable method, many of us forget to check in with ourselves until resentment or fear has already taken root. That is precisely where a dedicated worksheet comes in. It turns abstract self-reflection into concrete prompts, helping us catch small mistakes before they become big problems. Whether you are new to the steps or a seasoned veteran, understanding how to maximize the Step 10 Daily Inventory Worksheet can deepen your spiritual condition and keep your recovery fresh.

---

WHAT IS THE STEP 10 DAILY INVENTORY WORKSHEET?

---

A Step 10 Daily Inventory Worksheet is a guided journaling tool that helps individuals examine their thoughts, feelings, and actions at the end of each day. Unlike a full moral inventory (Steps 4 and 5), Step 10 is meant to be brief, honest, and forward-looking. The typical worksheet includes prompts about resentments, fears, selfishness, dishonesty, and harm done to others. It also provides space to note gratitude, positive actions, and amends needed.

The worksheet is designed to be used consistently, often as part of an evening routine. By writing down conflicts, successes, and areas for improvement, you build self-awareness and accountability. Many recovery communities offer free printable versions, while others prefer digital formats or spiral notebooks. The core elements remain the same: a structured review of the day through the lens of Step 10.

The Purpose Behind a Written

Inventory

Why write it down? Why not just think about your day in your head? Writing forces clarity. Thoughts are fleeting and easily distorted by pride or denial. When you put pen to paper, you externalize your inner world. The step 10 worksheet becomes a mirror that reflects your true emotional state. It also creates a record you can review later to spot patterns. For example, you might notice that every Tuesday you feel irritable at work, or that you tend to exaggerate stories after a stressful meeting. Without the worksheet, these patterns remain invisible.

Moreover, sharing your inventory with a sponsor or accountability partner deepens the process. A written worksheet makes it easier to discuss specific situations, admit faults, and receive feedback. It moves Step 10 from theory into action.

---

HOW TO USE A STEP 10 DAILY INVENTORY WORKSHEET EFFECTIVELY

---

Using the worksheet is straightforward, but effectiveness comes from consistency and honesty. Here is a step-by-step approach that many find helpful.

1. Choose a Consistent Time

Set aside ten to fifteen minutes each evening, ideally before bed. This quiet time allows you to reflect on the day without interruptions. Some people prefer to do their inventory in the morning for the previous day—whatever works for your schedule. The key is to make it a non-negotiable habit.

2. Start with Gratitude

Most step 10 worksheets begin with a gratitude list. Before examining flaws, note at least three things you are grateful for. This shifts your mindset toward positivity and reminds you of progress. Gratitude is the foundation of a healthy inventory because it prevents self-flagellation.

3. Scan for Resentments and Fears

Resentment is the number one offender in relapse. Ask yourself: “Did I feel angry, hurt, or annoyed today? Toward whom? Why?” Write these down without judgment. Similarly, note any fears that surfaced—whether about finances, relationships, or health. Fear often masquerades as anger or control. Identifying it is the first step to releasing it.

4. Examine Selfishness and Dishonesty

These two character defects are central to Step 10. Reflect on actions where you put your own needs ahead of others or where you were not completely truthful. Dishonesty includes small exaggerations, omitted facts, or promises you knew you couldn't keep. Be ruthlessly honest with yourself; the worksheet is private unless you choose to share it.

5. Note Any Harm Done

Consider whether you hurt someone today—by word, action, or inaction. Even a sharp tone or ignoring a message counts. Write down who was affected and how. This prompt keeps you mindful of your impact on others and prepares you to make amends quickly.

6. Acknowledge What Went Well

Balance the inventory by listing positive actions: times you were kind, helpful, patient, or took a right action. Step 10 is not only about mistakes; it celebrates growth. Record moments of service, acts of generosity, or times you paused before reacting.

7. Plan Amends If Needed

For any harm you identified, decide if an apology or amends is warranted. If yes, write a brief plan: "Tomorrow morning, apologize to Jane for snapping." Prompt amends prevent resentment from festering overnight.

8. Close with

Prayer or Reflection

Many worksheets end with a short prayer or affirmation, such as asking for guidance, forgiveness, or the strength to do better. You can also write a sentence summarizing your intention for the next day. This closing brings a sense of peace and closure to the process.

COMMON CHALLENGES AND HOW TO OVERCOME THEM

Even with a worksheet, doing Step 10 daily can feel like a chore. You might face resistance, boredom, or shame. Recognize these as normal. Here are solutions to common obstacles.

- "I don't have time." A thorough inventory takes only ten minutes. Use a simple template with five prompts. You can even do it while sitting in a parked car before entering the house. Time is a matter of priority, not availability.
- "I keep writing the same things." That's actually a gift. Repetitive patterns reveal core character defects. Instead of being discouraged, use the repetition to dig deeper. Ask your sponsor why you keep struggling with the same resentment or fear.
- "It feels fake or forced." Early on, the inventory might feel mechanical. That's okay. Keep doing it anyway. Over time, the practice becomes second nature. The discipline itself rewires your brain toward self-awareness.
- "I'm afraid of what I'll discover." Fear of truth is common. Remember, Step 10 is not about punishment; it is about cleaning house so you can walk freely. What you discover on the page is already known to your Higher Power. Writing it brings it into the light, reducing its power over you.

---

BENEFITS OF A DAILY INVENTORY PRACTICE

---

When used consistently, the Step 10 Daily Inventory Worksheet offers profound benefits that ripple into every area of life.

Increased Self-Awareness

Daily reflection trains you to notice your emotional state in real-time. You become quicker to spot when resentment is brewing or when you are about to act selfishly. This prevents many conflicts before they escalate.

Emotional Sobriety

Emotional sobriety is the ability to handle life's ups and downs without turning to substances or destructive behaviors. A daily inventory helps you process feelings constructively. You learn to sit with discomfort, name it, and let it go.

Improved Relationships

Because you note harm done and plan amends, your relationships become healthier. You apologize quickly and sincerely. People trust you because they see your commitment to honesty and growth.

Spiritual Maintenance

Step 10 is often called the "maintenance step" because it keeps your spiritual condition in check. Just as you brush your teeth daily to prevent cavities, you do a daily inventory to prevent spiritual decay. The worksheet becomes a touchstone for humility and gratitude.

Relapse Prevention

Relapse rarely happens out of the blue. It is preceded by weeks or months of neglecting Step 10. Old resentments, dishonesty, and unaddressed fears pile up. A daily inventory catches those warning signs early. Many recovering individuals credit their long-term sobriety to a rigorous Step 10 practice.

---

VARIATIONS OF THE STEP 10 WORKSHEET

---

Not all worksheets look the same. Some follow the exact wording from the Big Book of Alcoholics Anonymous. Others are adapted for modern use, incorporating elements of cognitive behavioral therapy or mindfulness. Here are a few common formats you might encounter.

1. The "Spot Check" Inventory: A short, on-the-spot inventory done during the day when you feel disturbed. It usually includes four questions: “Why do I feel this way? What is this feeling? What character defect is involved? What can I do differently?”

2. The End-of-Day Checklist: A simple list of yes/no questions: “Did I hold a resentment today? Was I dishonest? Was I selfish? Did I harm anyone? Did I help anyone?” This is good for beginners who need structure.
3. The Expanded Narrative Worksheet: A longer journaling format with open-ended prompts like “Today, I felt angry when...” and “Tomorrow, I will...” This allows for deeper exploration and is often preferred by those who enjoy writing.
4. The Digital App Version: Many recovery apps include a built-in Step 10 inventory with reminders and a password-protected log. This is convenient for people who are always on their phones.

Whichever format you choose, the essential elements remain: gratitude, inventory of defects, recognition of strengths, and a plan for amends. Feel free to customize the worksheet to suit your personality and recovery needs.

---

INTEGRATING STEP 10 WITH STEPS 11 AND 12

---

Step 10 does not exist in isolation. It works hand-in-hand with Step 11 (prayer and meditation) and Step 12 (service). Many daily inventory worksheets include space for a morning prayer or meditation (Step 11) and an evening review of service opportunities (Step 12). This three-step cycle forms a rhythm that sustains recovery over decades.

For example, after completing your evening inventory, you might say a prayer of gratitude and ask for guidance for the next day. In the morning, you meditate on how to be of service. At noon, you call a newcomer. This integration turns the worksheet from a solo activity into a whole-life practice.

---

CONCLUSION: SMALL DAILY ACTS, LASTING TRANSFORMATION

---

The Step 10 Daily Inventory Worksheet is more than a recovery tool—it is a discipline of the heart. It asks us to pause, reflect, and gently correct our course. In a world that moves fast and encourages defensiveness, taking ten minutes to admit we were wrong and express gratitude is revolutionary. The worksheet provides the structure, but the willingness to use it honestly is what transforms lives. Whether you print a template, buy a journal, or use an app, commit to this daily practice. Over time, you will notice that the person you see in the mirror each night becomes someone you are proud to know. That is the quiet miracle of Step 10.